DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

This Office Action is in response to Applicant's Election Response to prosecute the invention of claims 9-12 and 20-22. Claims 1-8, 13-16, 17-18, 23-27 and 28-29 are withdrawn from further consideration by the examiner, 37 CFR 1.142(b), as being drawn to a non-elected invention.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 9-12 and 20-22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Gosling et al (hereinafter, "Gosling", EP 0810524) in view of Aggrawal et al (hereinafter, "Aggrawal", 5,924,116)

As per claims 9 and 20, Gosling discloses a method for enabling a web client to add functionality to a web server on an as-needed basis, comprising the steps of:

- receiving a request from a client, the request identifying a code module required to process the request (col. 4, lines 42-53, and col. 6, lines 36-50).

However, Gosling does not explicitly disclose:

- responsive to a determination that the code module is not available at the web server, uploading a code module from the client to the web server; and

Art Unit: 2157

- at the web server, using the uploaded code module as needed to service a given request from the web client.

Aggrawal discloses a method and system of collaborating caching information including:

- responsive to a determination that the code module is not available at the web server, uploading a code module from the client to the web server (col. 5, lines 13-24); and
- at the web server, using the uploaded code module as needed to service a given request from the web client (col. 5, lines 13-24, Aggrawal discloses a servlet that allows a client program to upload additional information and execute the code within the server. The client disclose by Aggrawal can also act as a server. Therefore, Aggrawal discloses uploading a code module, as needed to the service a given request from a client).

Given the teaching of Aggrawal, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify Gosling by specifying that client uploads additional program code to be executed within the server in order to process the client request in a timely and efficient manner.

As per claim 10, Gosling discloses:

- wherein the web client is a pervasive computing client (col. 4, lines 59-65, Gosling discloses a client computer which is connected to a server computer by a transmission channel, which may be any wired or wireless transmission channel. Therefore, the client computer disclosed by Gosling meets the definition of a pervasive computing client.).

As per claim 11, Gosling discloses:

- wherein the code module translates data into a given proprietary format and serves the translated data back to the pervasive computing client (pg. 4, lines 13-15 and lines 34-

40, Gosling discloses that a servlet can perform format conversions and send the information back to the client).

As per claim 12, Gosling discloses:

- wherein the code module conforms to a given application programming interface (API) (pg. 3, lines 13-17 and pg. 5, lines 18-42).

As per claim 21, Gosling discloses:

- means for authenticating the given code module (pg. 4, lines 16-27 and lines 41-48).

As per claim 22, Gosling discloses:

- means for executing the code module to respond to the request (pg. 2, lines 30-35 and pg. 3, lines 13-19).
